

Hi Wesley, I wrote an article on the 20 of Nov. talking about this same thing. My name is Becca Penneta, I am a student Journalist from Watauga Middle School. First we want you to know we are a Pro/life ORG. put together by the students. We can not pick you up very well over here, so we have to gather in to a school bus that has a radio on it, and that's the way we can hear you. I'm not able to get to your web/site for some reason. Do you know why? Anyway I would like for you to deal with this article. I will include it below.

Does life begin at conception?

Written by,

Becca Penneta,

Many people today say that "life may begin at conception".

What do they mean when they say "life may begin at conception" it either does, or it doesn't. There is no "maybe" to it.

A well known radio, and TV talk show host (Bill O'reilly) said you must say that "there is a potential life at conception" then you have a case, but if you say "that life does, begin at conception then you lose". However it sounds like that O'reilly is just catering to the abortionist their selves.

Secondly he says you can not use the Bible to show that life begins at conception, for you will be looked down on as being too "christian", which is not a good thing.

"Christians are nothing more than babbling fools that don't know what their talking about" he says.

He says by bringing=2

God in to your argument you automatically lose the argument, "because we are a secular society who do not believe in God so the minute you bring God in to the argument you will lose every time." This type of thinking is dangerous to society.

If there is only a potential for life then the abortionist will win the argument, it's either life does, begin at conception, or it doesn't. If it doesn't then the abortionist have won, because their point, is life doesn't begin at conception.

By saying that there is only a potential life then you are saying exactly what the abortionist are saying.

God says that life begins at conception then it must. Who is O'reilly to say any different. God is the one that created life, so He should know when it begins, and when it ends.

Who does O'reilly thank he is by trying to play God, and who does he thank he is to say God doesn't need to be brought in to the argument?

The Bible is clear on this issue! Life begins at conception. It is when we decide to throw God, and His Word out the window that we begin to have problems like this. It is when we decide to lean to our own understanding rather than turning to the Word of God that we would let the congress, the senate, and the white house tell us what's right, and wrong.

We only have to look back 35, or 40 years ago, and we will see where we have went wrong. When we send the message that you can "do what ever fills good"

"git high"

"tune in", and

"drop out". These are the very ideas that shaped the culture at that time, and we are still paying for those ideas, and their consequences today. These ideas have their beginning straight from the very pit of hell, and that is something that even Bill O'reilly can not deny.

As pro/life as Bill O'reilly says he is, it sure doesn't sound like it, when he says "there is a potential life".

What's he talking about, "potential life"?

"Potential life"!

Please explain that one to me, It's either a life, or it isn't.

Abortion is a lust of the flesh, and it must be condemned.

(Romans 13 verses 12 through 14 says,

The night is far spent, the day is at hand let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light. Let us walk honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying. But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts their of.

If we ever survive we will haf to turn back to the Bible, and its teachings, or we will continue down this godless road of self destruction.
